'Rainfed region will get enough rainfall this year'

The cyclone man of India, as India Meteorological Department (IMD) Director General MRUTYUNJAY MOHAPATRA is known, believes in accuracy and dismisses individual models predicting cyclones as pseudo forecasters. In an interview with Ramani Ranian Mohapatra. the IMD chief talks about the onset of monsoon, rainfall distribution, the increasing trend of tropical cyclones over the Arabian Sea, and the reason behind the rising sea level. Edited excerpts:

The southwest monsoon has been delayed and is now likely to hit the Kerala coast by June 3. But a private agency has announced the onset of monsoon in the state. What explains this difference?

The normal date of southwest monsoon setting over Kerala is June 1, with a standard deviation of plus-minus five days. Therefore, it is not delayed if the rain sets in on June 3. Our forecast is scientific. based on an objective criterion, considers the strength of monsoon winds in terms of their speed and depth in the atmosphere. It considers its impact in terms of the cloudiness and rainfall occurring over the region. When all these conditions are satisfied, monsoon will be declared.

The IMD has updated its forecast that India is likely to receive 101 per cent of the long period average this year. What about rainfall distribution?

The IMD has taken several new initiatives concerning monsoon predictions. In a first for IMD, we have provided the rainfall distribution across the country. The rainfall distribution was issued in the first stage forecast issued on April 16. In the second forecast, we also predicted rainfall distribution across India. Now, while we have predicted normal rainfall in northwest India and the southern peninsula, northeast India is expected to have below-normal rainfall and central India is likely to have abovenormal rainfall activity, which is good for agriculture and water resources. Central which covers Odisha, India Chhattishgarh, Maharashtra, Madhya Pradesh, and Gujarat — mainly depends on rainfall for agriculture, which can also be called a rainfed area. So for the first time, we have predicted the forecast for the rainfed area. The rainfed area includes Rajasthan and Jharkhand, in addition to Central India. In another initiative, we have predicted rainfall in June. which is likely to see normal rainfall.

Two cyclones have hit the western and eastern coasts in less than a fortnight. While cyclones are frequent over the Bay of Bengal, there is an increasing trend of tropical cyclones over the Arabian Sea. What is the reason?

Yes, the number of intense cyclones is showing an increasing trend over the Arabian Sea since 1990. But there is no such trend over the Bay of Bengal, which means the number of intense cyclones is neither increasing nor decreasing here. Studies by members of international expert committees on the impact of climate change and tropical cyclones attribute the trend in the frequency of intense cyclones in the Arabian Sea to global warming or climate change. We agree, but with low confidence. It is because the studies carried out so far show conflicting results. Also, the number of cyclones that develop over the Arabian Sea is very rare. However, studies have shown that sea surface temperature is rising and ocean heat content is increasing, which are favourable for the intensification of cyclones.

There have been conflicting reports over the exact landfall location of Cyclone Yaas. Would vou like to clarify?

IMD's forecast has never changed from the beginning. We have maintained that the cyclone will cross around Balasore between Paradip and Sagar Island in the north Odisha-West Bengal coast. The red line, the most probable track along with the balloon, always hinted at it just south of Balasore. As the cyclone came close, we made it more specific that it will pass through between Dhamra and Balasore, and it happened so. There was no change in our forecast. The problem is everybody wants to be a forecaster. The reason why some people were confused was because of the pseudo forecasting. Those who have no expertise or are not mandated in cyclone forecasting go to the public for the sake of popularity, which gets the media attention.

Incidents of seawater entering villages during cyclones have increased over the vears. What do you think is the reason and how should states prepare for this? Cyclone Yaas was a very severe cyclonic storm. Our storm surge model predicted the surge will be above 4 metres when the cyclone was approaching. Also, the day when the cyclone hit the coast was a full moon day, because of which the sea swelled and astronomical tide became maximum.

The sea level is rising because of climate change, adding to the tidal waves when a cyclone is crossing the coast.
